BR Hills

2 nights

Summary

The Biligiri Rangaswamy (BR) Hills are located just to the east of the Nilgiris, with forested corridors connecting its natural areas to that of the Nilgiris and to the Western Ghats beyond. Although part of the Eastern Ghats, BR Hills's proximity to the Western Ghats and its altitudinal extent - rising close to 2000m in parts - have resulted in much shared biota with the biodiversity rich, wet forests of the Western Ghats.

BR Hills holds a significant elephant population, shared with the neighboring forests in the Nilgiris. The deciduous and evergreen forests here also hold typical representatives of megafauna of Peninsular India, including Tiger, Leopard, Gaur, Sambar, Sloth bear and Wild dog and a diversity of smaller animals. Typical Western Ghats species are most obviously noticed among birds - including Malabar Whistling Thrush, Nilgiri Wood Pigeon and Ruby-throated Bulbul among a checklist of over 200 species - and in its flora.

As is typical for south India's hill forests, BR Hills's forested valleys and mountainscapes are scenically beautiful and its local forest dwelling tribes and their traditional lifestyle adds to the charm of the location. An added allure of this location is its quieter, less touristy forest routes as compared to the more popular parks in the Nilgiris.
